Week in a Nutshell

Reading: We worked hard reading Snowshoe Hare's Winter Home while learning routines in our journals. Some of this work is still a bit tricky to complete independently, but I'm still providing lots of support.

Writing— Our writing program aligns directly with reading. We often are looking for evidence from the text to support our writing. We are writing narrative pieces this week and next.

Math— We have been working on measurement with centimeters and meters. We've also learned some estimation strategies related a centimeter to our pinky finger and a meter to the distance of our door handle to the floor.

Science—We actually had the chance to go out on the playground this week to build landforms. We also started reading about Earth's water features.

7 Habits—We've learned the general idea of Habits 1–3 so far in 2nd grade. We will wrap up our general study of the habits next week, then have the opportunity to really dive into each habit per month. October will focus on being proactive—Habit 1!
